

HEALING

Alternative Designs for Quarantine Cities

EXTENDED VERSION 07 / 07 / 2020

NON ARCHITECTURE

We can consider “architecture” everything that has already been designed and/or built that would define a realm of conventional solutions, often repeated in a self-referential system. We imagined a counterpart, a “non architecture”. A world of unexplored designs and countless possibilities, that if found, could enlarge and change permanently the boundaries of architecture. A universe of chances and opportunities never challenged by architects before. A limitless field of investigation that includes everything that is not architecture, yet.

Non Architecture Competitions aims to find unconventional and unexplored design solutions in the field of architecture. The second phase of competitions is structured in 9+1 themes: a Research Ecosystem with the purpose of exploring each theme from different perspectives. All competitions have their focus on tackling the big issues of tomorrow, by seeking nontraditional approaches in the architect’s work.

The HEALING - Alternative Designs for Quarantine Cities is one of the Non Architecture “Pandemic Society” competitions.

INTRODUCTION

In this competition we ask you come up with visionary concepts for alternative urban life in relation to the COVID-19 emergency – Only 3 drawings, absolute freedom of scale, site or program. You are asked to reimagine urban life through a variety of creative design concepts and ideas.

Cities have historically been hubs for ideas, commerce, culture, science, productivity, social connections and much more. While being the core of global development, they have faced considerable challenges, becoming the main stage to experience tangible consequences of our society's biggest criticalities, like scarcity of resources, climate change, natural disasters, health, ecosystems loss, epidemics, education, crime and poverty.

Their central role in human civilization is expected to gain further relevance since the United Nations predicts that by 2050 two thirds of the world population will be living in urban areas. What kind of role can we play as designers in reimagining urban life? How can we produce new inspiring visions to trigger a discussion around alternative models of urban living?

HEALING –Alternative Designs for Quarantine Cities aims to answer those questions with particular focus on the current emergency related to the COVID-19 outbreak.

COMPETITION BRIEF

QUARANTINE & POST-QUARANTINE CITIES

COVID-19 opened a new scenario for humanity. The world population was forced into quarantine and social distancing, with incredibly heavy load on healthcare systems and the horizon of an economic crisis ahead.

While all around the globe countries responded with different measures and levels of isolation, it seems to be clear for all that there will be no easy fix to the emergency. Considered the current developments in China, Hong Kong and South Korea, we are likely to transition through different degrees of isolation while a vaccine or herd immunity are achieved. That could take many months, if not years.

What do we do in the meantime? How do we support the healthcare system and reduce the spreading of the virus? How do we mitigate the impact of isolation on our mental and physical health? How do we recover from quarantine in order to support all the sectors that were hit by this crisis? How can our society and economy function while maintaining a level of safety and social distancing?

This containment period forced us to drastically reconsider our lifestyle and priorities. We had to reduce to the absolute minimum the amount of activities and interactions while our environmental impact seemed to be reducing. International media broadcasted images of wildlife taking over empty cities, and, with drastic travelling reduction, also pollution levels appeared to be lower than usual. This slower lifestyle became for many a time for introspection and an opportunity to reconsider their life choices.

How can we use quarantine to adopt a healthier and less impactful way of living? How can we make sure that the few benefits of a slow lifestyle are preserved after this time? What new normality is ahead?

Submission can address some of these questions. The proposal submitted could be a device, piece of furniture, interior design project, pavilion, building, urban plan or something different. Scale of intervention, program dimensions, and location are not given, and they can be arranged by the participants to better suit their design.

Projects should provide a positive solution to improve current conditions.

EVALUATION

The core values of the competition are:

/ Innovation - In terms of program management, technology and originality of the formal solution proposed.

/ Communication - Clarity, appeal and experimentation in the presentation of the proposal.

/ Relevance - The degree to which the proposal is related or useful to the proposed theme.

These values will lead the selection of the finalists' projects and they will be used by the jury as a guideline in their decision.

Remember that this is a competition of ideas, an opportunity to experiment and explore the limits of architecture representation. The jury reserves the right to award any proposal that fails at any of the parameters mentioned in these rules, as long as it justifies the breach of the rule in favour of the value of the proposal.

The voting system to choose the winning projects is as follows:

1. The Non Architecture competitions team, following the main values of the competition, will make an initial selection of 50 finalist projects in response to the above mentioned criteria. The amount of pre-selected projects can slightly vary according to the judgment of the pre-selection team.
2. The members of the jury will study the pre-selected projects privately and give an evaluation for each one of them. Votes will be compared and revised to reach a common agreement on the selection of winners and honourable mentions.

In order to guarantee the authenticity of the awarding process, the prize's selection cannot be appealed.

Non Architecture will have full rights to publish and promote this material, always making proper mention of their authors.
